

SECTION 3

LIFE IN FULNECK

Fulneck was organised similar to the way Zinzendorf had created Herrnhut. A large place for church meetings, various accommodation according to marital status (the choirs) and a place for work.

The Sister's House

The Brethren's House

Everybody had to promise to live by community rules. The head of the settlement, a co-worker and a warden were the leading officials who assured life ran smoothly. Trading rules made sure transactions were fair and honest. Laziness, bullying and gossip were frowned upon.

The Brethren's Workshops

The following stories describe how life was for some of the residents:-

A single sister's story

A single brethren's story

The shoe maker

A single sisters' labouress
