

G) ONE MAN'S VISION

The Bankhouse Pudsey

The Moravians began to visit the families that Benjamin Ingham was unable to reach. They set up a base near Halifax, and a messenger arrived to say a family at Bankhouse Pudsey had a sick child and wished for a visit.

Zinzendorf himself rode on horseback across towards Pudsey. As he travelled through Tong he looked across the valley. Seeing how beautiful it was he felt it would be an ideal location to build a new community, similar to the one at Herrnhut. Luckily the land was for sale and was bought by the wife of Benjamin Ingham for £905.

The ideas of his boyhood to do something special were again growing but in a different country.
